Engaging people differently

Meaningfully engaging people in re-design and improvement work

The diagram illustrates a process flow. On the left, three orange rectangular boxes are stacked vertically, each preceded by a white circle with an orange outline. The first box contains the text 'Meaningfully engaging people in re-design and improvement work'. The second box contains 'What we learned?'. The third box contains 'What was the impact?'. To the right of these boxes, two green arrows point to the right. The top arrow is labeled 'People felt listened to' and points to a green speech bubble containing the text '...good for us to know that someone is listening to what we have to say'. The bottom arrow is labeled 'Future change' and points to a green speech bubble containing the text 'I'm glad that sharing our experiences can help create a better future for others'.

People felt listened to

“...good for us to know that someone is listening to what we have to say”

What we learned?

Future change

“I’m glad that sharing our experiences can help create a better future for others”

What was the impact?

What next?

- Continuation of approach across the partnership – this has been agreed with our leadership
- This approach remains embedded within our Keys to Life Action plan
- This approach is now also influencing strategic work within different areas moving forward
- Present approach and learning following the end of project phase to the Partnership
- To continue connection, conversation both within services, teams and communities
